Global Energy Group Co-Head Henry Stewart commented: “We’re pleased that WFW has once again performed well in these key league table rankings, highlighting our standing as one of the world’s top legal advisers for energy and infrastructure expertise. This is notably the case for renewables, where we have long been a global leader, and cements WFW’s commitment to promoting sustainability and the energy transition”.

Global Energy Group Co-Head Malte Jordan added: “These results demonstrate the strength and depth of our European network in particular, as well as a growing reputation for excellence advising on infrastructure projects. Achieving such positive results is testament to the hard work and skill of our team worldwide”.
